Drastic Changes Urged

Menzies Hammers UN for Ignoring Hungary Report

LONDON (UP) — Australian Prime Minister Robert G. Menzies tonight called for drastic procedural changes to make the United Nations "truly the parliament of the world" in the "democratic sense."

In a speech prepared for delivery at the Australia Club dinner, he cited the Egyptian nationalization of the Suez Canal and the United Nations' treatment of the Anglo-French action in the Suez, Israel and Hungary as indicative that the world body was applying "double standards" in dealing with international disputes.

He said he could not understand why the United Nations subcommittee report on Hungary "should be allowed to rest in pigeon holes until the General Assembly, at leisure, could reach it towards the end of the year."

He regarded the assembly procedures as "unsound and thought they must be remodelled upon a 'basis of justice for all.'"

He noted there had been some disposition both in the United States and elsewhere to regard the taking of a matter to the United Nations as "itself an act of policy." He disagreed with such disposition and urged the nations not to think that reference to the United Nations was a substitute for the careful formation of national policies.

Canada-U.S. Rupture?

Trade Switch Feared

NEW YORK (CP) — The Herald Tribune, commenting on Prime Minister Diefenbaker's remark that he would like to see about 5 per cent of Canada's imports from the U.S. diverted to Britain, says it fears the trend "might not top at 15 per cent."

"A drastic revision of trade channels would not only injure a very important outlet for American goods," the paper says in an editorial, "but do serious harm to relations between two countries that have every reason to hold together."

It should be realized in the U.S., the paper says, that "Canada's foreign trade is vital to that country's booming economy."

Moreover, while the United States and Canada are each other's best customers, the balance is in favor of the United States.

"In the interests of harmony between two neighbor states it is essential that the United States take another long look at its trade with Canada; determine whether tariffs and quotas are causing unnecessary harm and whether surplus commodity disposal policies can be adjusted more closely to Canada's needs."

They Said He Was Dead

Pinching himself to make sure he's alive after being told by the provincial motor vehicle branch he was dead, Victoria barber Jim McAree, 927 Forshaw, received the startling news when applying for a new driver's licence. He hasn't had one since 1934, when he stopped driving. Motor vehicle branch files had him marked "deceased." — (Colonist photo by Jim Ryan.)

Bomb Ban Stalls

LONDON (AP) — Russia threw cold water on United States proposals for a 10-month suspension of hydrogen bomb tests Monday. It was seen by some observers as an apparent stiffening of the Soviet attitude on disarmament.

Soviet delegate Valerian Zorin, told the five-power United Nations disarmament subcommittee in a 90-minute speech that a 10-month suspension would be too short to be of significant value. He renewed Soviet demands that the tests be suspended immediately for two or three years.

He insisted that East and West get together to work out some formula by which the use of nuclear weapons could be renounced.

Western delegates were shaken by the speech. They asked that no session be held today while the statement is carefully examined.

British Foreign Minister Selwyn Lloyd, who presided over Monday's subcommittee meeting, termed the speech "disappointing." French representative Jules Moch said it "seemed propagandist."

NO STEP BACK

The statement followed a declaration by Moscow radio that anyone who expected "concessions" as a result of last week's Kremlin-shakeup would be "disappointed."

On U.S. official commented that the speech would disappoint anyone who had looked for concessions but maintained at the same time that Zorin took no backward step.

"Anyone who had expected them to step backward would have been encouraged," the U.S. informants said.

Sweeping Powers

B.C. Could Draft Citizens in Strike

Civil servants may have a hard time establishing picket lines around government buildings in the event of a strike.

And, under provisions of the Civil Defence Act, cabinet would be able to pass an order pressing any citizen into service of the government if a state of disaster were declared.

Section 46 of the Public Works Act gives cabinet authority to prohibit the public or any persons from using any path, lane or driveway through lands belong to the Crown leading to or from any public building or public work "whether or not the same has been dedicated or established as a public highway."

Legal opinions sought yesterday stated that all streets, although maintained by the city, were in fact provincial highways and that pickets could be prevented from being in such areas.

The other point in Section 5 of the Civil Defence Act enables cabinet to designate a disaster area and also gives the government authority to summon the assistance of any person between the ages of 18 and 60 excepting trainmen, telegraphers, dispatchers and doctors to work with or without salary.

Failure to comply is liable to a fine of not less than $25 and not more than $100.

Cabinet Calls for Talks; New Wage Offer Possible

Nearly 1,600 provincial civil servants, packed to standing room only in the Club Sirocco, indicated by tumultuous and extended applause last night that they would settle their dispute with the government for "no less than a collective bargaining procedure."

The meeting took this position when Alfred C. Bennett, assistant general secretary of the B.C. Government Employees' Association, said that Premier W. A. C. Bennett might make a new offer at a meeting of association representatives with the provincial cabinet here at 4 p.m. tomorrow.

The meeting was suggested by Provincial Secretary Wesley Black, in a telegram to association president George Horridge.

The invitation was immediately accepted by the association.

Referring to the government strike-and-be-fired order, Mr. Bennett told the Victoria branch of the association:

PAST MONEY STAGE

"This dispute has gone past the stage where money is a factor. This is a matter now which affects our citizenship—the right to do things in a free country which we always thought we could do without intimidation."

"The fact we have called a strike at 7 p.m. Friday is, I think, an absolute necessity."

"If we fall down to the dictatorial edict of the government, the service would deteriorate... no man or woman can work when his dignity has been destroyed."

Loud applause followed this statement and many others, showing a surprising determination among the civil servants.

ONLY 14 QUIT

Mr. Bennett said only 14 resignations had been received by the association since May 24.

The 100,000-member British Columbia Federation of Labor, is "behind you 100 per cent," Mr. Bennett told the civil servants.

At a meeting yesterday, the federation promised "unqualified support" and set up a strike committee to work with the association's strike committee.

Leslie Wismer, director of government affairs for the Canadian Labor Congress, added last night that the federation would appeal to every union in the province to give financial support.

'AMAZING' ATTITUDE

The attitude of the provincial government was amazing, Mr. Wismer declared.

"I can't believe in 1957 in progressive Canada that there could be a government as stubborn as this one."

"Practically every provincial government has some sort of practical way of dealing with their employees' associations. Nobody else in Canada has such relations with the government as you have."

He said the average civil service wage was $157 an hour, while a school janitor at Port Alberni got $1.68 an hour, and the average woodworker $370 a month.

'CAN'T MAKE CASE'

"All the figures are on your side," Mr. Wismer said. "The government can't make a case before an impartial arbitrator. That is why they don't want to set one up."

The association called for a permanent impartial arbitration board in a telegram to the government yesterday.

The same telegram, read to the meeting, said the civil servants were ready to maintain essential services such as jails, mental hospitals and forest fire lookouts if the government asked them to, and that no settlement would be satisfactory unless the government promised that there would be no discrimination against workers who supported the association's actions.

ROOMS BOOKED

D. W. C. Huggins, branch president, said strike committee rooms had already been booked at the Empress Hotel.

He added: "We don't want to strike. If we can reach an agreement with the government, we won't have to go through this nasty business again."

Mr. Bennett said: "We can't lose this deal. We are sure we can go ahead and feel justified in what we are doing."

NOT PROHIBITIVE

The civil servant's oath of office and oath of allegiance have "no prohibitive factors whatsoever," he said.

"If there had been any prohibiting factors I am sure we would have heard about it from the government long before this."

As to ethics of professional men preventing them from striking, Mr. Bennett said that "has been nothing more than a cloak to hide behind in a strike."

Ontario

Rain Ruins Crops

WINDSOR, Ont. (CP) — A storm that unloaded three inches of rain in Essex County Monday is expected to cost Ontario farmers hundreds of thousands of dollars. Fields were flooded, ruining some crops and hindering the harvest of others.

In Windsor, basements at Metropolitan and Grace Hospitals were flooded and pumped out. In neighboring communities storm sewers backed up, covering streets with rainwater. An average of 3.4 inches fell on farmlands.

The potato harvest, delayed until two weeks ago because of low prices, came to a sudden halt and potatoes are threatened with rot if water doesn't drain away rapidly.

Back from Siberia

'Come On Home, Boys' Meant End of Hell

By JOHN SHAW VII
"In February, 1954, we were shipped to the Ural. About 9,600 of us went to Sverdlovsk, in Siberia," he said. "We wanted to strike to force the Russians to send us home. We knew others had gone. We were getting good food, now, and we were stronger."
Since 1945 Ernest Graf had been in Russian hands. He had been starved and tortured and left alone to die in an earthen cell. He had been beaten, interminably and marched on bare and frozen feet until he dropped in exhaustion. He had been deprived of clothing, food, water, rest. Everything had been done to force a false confession from him of participation in some sort of massacre or other crime of which he still has no knowledge.

MARGUERITE MARTHA VAN DER BOGERT

'Confessed'
When he finally signed a confession, he was sentenced to 25 years' hard labor as a war criminal. But he had been no more than an ambulance driver—an immigrant boy returned to Germany from Canada, where his parents still made their home.
Now, while others were leaving for the German homeland, he and his comrades were being transported back to Siberia and the Ural mines. So they refused to work.
The authorities were annoyed and the men were threatened; but they were desperate. And men who had survived as much as they had, astonishing fortitude. They defied their captors.
From Moscow came the order: They were to go home. But first, back to work for discipline's sake! A group of about 40 recalcitrants were rounded up by the guards and driven at gun point into the tundra. Dogs harried them. They would be ordered to lie down suddenly; and if they did not, shots would be fired over their heads.

Suicides
It was, apparently, a sort of disciplinary action. But with men who had been treated like animals for so long it had little effect. They ran where they were driven. Eventually, one of them was shot. The guards spread the story that the man had fallen and had been pierced through the head by a crowbar, but later three of the guards committed suicide.
The Russians themselves appeared to be tiring of the sport with the German prisoners.
Meanwhile, Lieut. Herman Schindler, who had befriended Ernest while they were in a prison camp together and shared his parcels with him, had been repatriated. He had written to Ernest's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Graf at their home in Port Alberni.

Reds to Free Germans?

BONN (AP)—Russia has agreed to discuss with West Germany problems of repatriating German citizens from the Soviet Union.
But Moscow denied, in a note published here today, Bonn's claim that "many thousands" of Germans are being detained in Russia against their will.

In Sympathy with Shore Workers

Net Fishermen Still Out

Some 3,500 salmon net fishermen and Allied Workers' Union men along the British Columbia coast remained on strike yesterday in sympathy with "locked out" shore workers.
Included in the strike, which started June 22, are about 200 gillnetters and 25 small seine fishery operating from island points such as Campbell River, Nanaimo, Port Alberni and Alert Bay.

The union has wired the department of labor in Victoria protesting the "illegal lockout," he said.
Cannery workers in Steveston, Vancouver and other coast points were scheduled to hold meetings last night to vote on whether to call out a minority of workers not locked out. Mr. Stevens said.
The association says the so-called "lockout" was an ordinary call.
Meanwhile, salmon runs have been accepted by strikers.

Lord Vincent Massey, an old of Balliol College, Oxford, dined with fellow alumni at a dinner given by the Balliol Society. The guest of honor was another Balliol man—Prime Minister Harold Macmillan. Mr. Massey is expected to see the Queen and Prince Philip this week to talk about arrangements for the royal visit to Canada, Oct. 12-16.

OTTAWA (C.P.)—The number of months of 1956, the federal house families in Canada increased in the early months of 1957 at double the rate of a year previous while mortgage money continued scarce the whole country by April, and new house-building lagged. Meantime, the number of farm, Central Mortgage and Housing Corp. in Canada in the first three months of 1957 increased by 11. Free Trade Area Threat

Canada Guards British Tariffs

OTTAWA (C.P.)—Canada has decided to put up a strong fight against the inclusion of food products in Europe's proposed new trading, the so-called free trade area, federal authorities said Monday.

They fear such inclusion might jeopardize Canada's market in Britain for millions of dollars worth of foodstuffs by eventual watering away of Canada's tariff advantages gained through Commonwealth preferences.

Prime Minister Diefenbaker indicated Canada's dissatisfaction Saturday when he told a press conference Canada would take a "benevolent" view of Britain joining the free trade area as long as Commonwealth farm products were not included.

Britain, which plans to join the free trade area later this year, has given assurances to Canada and other Commonwealth partners that she will press for exclusion of farm products from the scheme.

The Menace Is Ended

TO the city council of 1957 will go credit for taking action on the replacement of Point Ellice bridge, and thus ending a menace which has hung over the community for a good many years. Some spectators who watched the first approach-span being removed from its socket last week can remember the disaster which carried out the older bridge, with serious loss of life at the end of a May 24 holiday long ago. The bridge then built was a handsome structure for its day. There was nothing amiss with it until the time came when the City decided to string a heavy water main along one side. The late Mr. F. M. Preston, city engineer at that time, advised against that; but he was overruled.

Mr. Preston did not live to learn that his predictions were correct. The warnings he laid before the city council at that time and repeatedly for many years proved fully justified. The one-sided weight of the water main soon affected the alignment of the bridge, caused serious displacement of its main longitudinal steel, and coupled with the vibration from passing traffic set up the condition which caused the weakening of the whole structure. In the bridge now to be built a water main will be accommodated, but its weight will be centred and therefore balanced. That meets Mr. Preston's objection to the original structure.

There will be a considerable difference in the traffic conditions affecting the old structure and that now to take its place. The old bridge bore the brunt of street cars descending a steep hill to the west of the bridge and arriving on its deck with considerable thrust and impact. The street cars are gone, the hill has been scaled down appreciably, and the new traffic — while probably heavier than before — will be rubber-tired and shock-absorbed to a degree unknown in the earlier period. For these reasons, and there are also some others, the new Point Ellice bridge will start its life under more advantageous circumstances than its predecessor.

It would be a gracious and fitting gesture to the integrity and ability of the late Mr. Preston if some member of his family were available to cut the tape on the new structure when it is completed. No one warned more clearly of the menace that would confront the community if an unbalanced load were placed on the old structure, and no one would be happier today could he know that its replacement came in time.

Breathing New Air

NEWS dispatches have made clear that the most arresting figure at the Commonwealth premiers' conference in London was Mr. John Diefenbaker. It had been said before his arrival that the eclipse of the Liberals would mean diminution of Canadian influence abroad; that the new and unknown quality of a prime minister other than Mr. St. Laurent would relegate him to comparative obscurity. The prophets were confounded. As Canadian voters proved a month ago so the London conference emphasized that no one man or one government is indispensable.

Far from being a freshman in a subdued role the dynamic Mr. Diefenbaker caused the United Kingdom to sit up and take notice. He was friendly with the press, able and ready to give crisp unhesitating answers to the most awkward questions. His zeal and enthusiasm for the Commonwealth breathed new air into the conference. He was a bright challenging figure, with ideas to expound and the ability to expound them. The range of his visits and contacts while abroad made it evident that Canada's new prime minister made a deep impression everywhere he went.

Mr. Diefenbaker's belief in the Commonwealth is positive; that is to say he favors co-operative action instead of mere lip service. The Commonwealth must mean more than fealty to a common tradition or a mere grouping on paper of nations presumed to have intimate connection. The members should seek strength through trading together, interchanging their markets for the good of all and serving in consequence as a potent force for peace. The Commonwealth nations produce and consume practically all commodities known to man, and mutual self-interest suggests the wisdom of improving their economic ties.

In short Mr. Diefenbaker believes that if the Commonwealth is to prosper its members should get down to brass tacks and set about more intimate economic relations. That is the basis of his desire for a trade conference to be held in Ottawa this year. There can be no doubt the Canadian prime minister awakened his colleagues at the London gathering to a new outlook on the immense possibilities of the Commonwealth if its members join hands in a new deal. Certainly he set at rest any idea that a change of government at Ottawa meant a lessening of Canadian influence in Commonwealth councils. Exactly the opposite proved to be the case.

Canada's Arctic Lands

ONE of the side effects of this country's participation in the current International Geophysical Year will be the unaccustomed degree to which Canada's Arctic archipelago will be travelled this year and next. Canadian observation bases have already been established at a number of points within the Arctic Circle, and at one place actually within 450 miles of the pole. On Ellesmere Island and elsewhere in the far North these bases will have to be serviced and kept supplied. That implies a degree of traffic that the northern territory has not known before.

Listed on every atlas, the total land area of Canadian islands in the Arctic Circle has been little realized until recent times. Together they are about equal to two average Canadian provinces in area, while difficult of access and subject to the rigors of the far North. On the other hand, any moderation of the ice cap at the pole in future time could affect these possessions materially. Some of the islands are known to be highly mineralized, and two at least have a considerable land mass. Even if they must remain as assets in cold storage for the present, the Arctic islands are part of Canada and we should know more about them.

The work of servicing northern scientific bases in the geophysical year will be the main effort at the present, but even that much cannot be done without learning a good deal more about the archipelago, its waterways, its bays and its general features than has been known before. All of this knowledge will be a gain, and much of it important for future reference.

Kremlin Shake-Up Studied

By CHARLES M. MCCANN
United Press Staff Correspondent

ONE big question in the Kremlin shake-up is whether or not Soviet Russia is heading again toward a one-man dictatorship.

It may be several weeks before the full significance of the shake-up becomes apparent.

For the moment, it is clear that Communist chieftain Nikita S. Khrushchev has emerged the victor in a long and serious dispute on policy with Vyacheslav M. Molotov, Georgi M. Malenkov and Lazar M. Kaganovich.

But there is reason to doubt that Khrushchev either aspires to be dictator or could be if he wanted to.

Molotov, Malenkov and Kaganovich are accused of opposing Khrushchev and Premier Nikolai A. Bulganin in nearly everything that came up in the Kremlin.

This included agricultural and industrial reforms and reorganizations and a somewhat more liberal government set-up.

It included relations with leaders of other Communist countries, notably President Tito of Yugoslavia who led the movement toward Independent Communism.

Khrushchev and Bulganin realized that the day when Russia could exert complete domination of the affairs of other Communist countries has ended.

In foreign policy, the Khrushchev-Bulganin program of "peaceful co-existence" with Western countries and the development of personal contacts with the leaders of those countries was involved.

It is indicated strongly that domestic policy and relations with leaders of other Communist countries overshadowed foreign relations in importance.

Actually, Khrushchev and Bulganin had pursued their policy of "co-existence" despite Molotov. When he opposed the personal contact technique, Khrushchev and Bulganin simply left him home while they made personal contact visits abroad. A year ago, they threw him out of his post of foreign minister.

But Molotov who once had been regarded as Joseph Stalin's heir, Malenkov who succeeded Stalin as premier only to be deposed, and Kaganovich kept on fighting.

How serious the situation became is shown by the fact that in the big shake-up five of the 11 members of the Communist praesidium—the men who really rule Russia—were ousted.

Naturally, the shake-up has strengthened Khrushchev as the No. 1 man in Russia's collective leadership. The position of the army in politics has been strengthened by the promotion of Defence Minister Georgi K. Zhukov to full membership in the praesidium. He is the first professional soldier to become a full member.

"... of shoes and ships and sealing wax—of cabbages and kings."

By TOM TAYLOR

IT is a commonplace to receive an official letter in which the sender tells you he has "the honor to forward herewith" etc., and subscribes himself "I have the honor to be, Sir, your obedient servant."

There is no particular honor being done the official who thus prostrates himself before you.

If the truth were known he probably thought the correspondent a frightful bore.

Nor does "Your obedient servant" necessarily speak of veracity. Sometimes the contents are in direct contradiction to this sentiment, as for instance when a request is refused in stilted but nevertheless final language.

This sort of thing has been going on for a long time, centuries in fact, so it was not surprising that the government of India for one decided the time had come to be sensible. It instructed its officials to eliminate all reference to honor and self-petal the obedience. Official letters were enjoined to carry the more modest subscription "Yours faithfully."

"Yours faithfully" is a widely used appellation. Business as well as government makes great play with it, although often enough faith is not involved in the slightest degree.

Some attempts at variation are made. There are letters which ring the changes on "sincerely," for instance, perhaps according to the amount of literal truth implied. Thus we have "Sincerely yours" and "Yours sincerely," and, if a deep impression is desired, "Very sincerely yours."

More simply again, and probably growing in popular favor, is the ending "Yours truly," with "very" being interposed if the signator wants to add a note of warmth to his formal farewell.

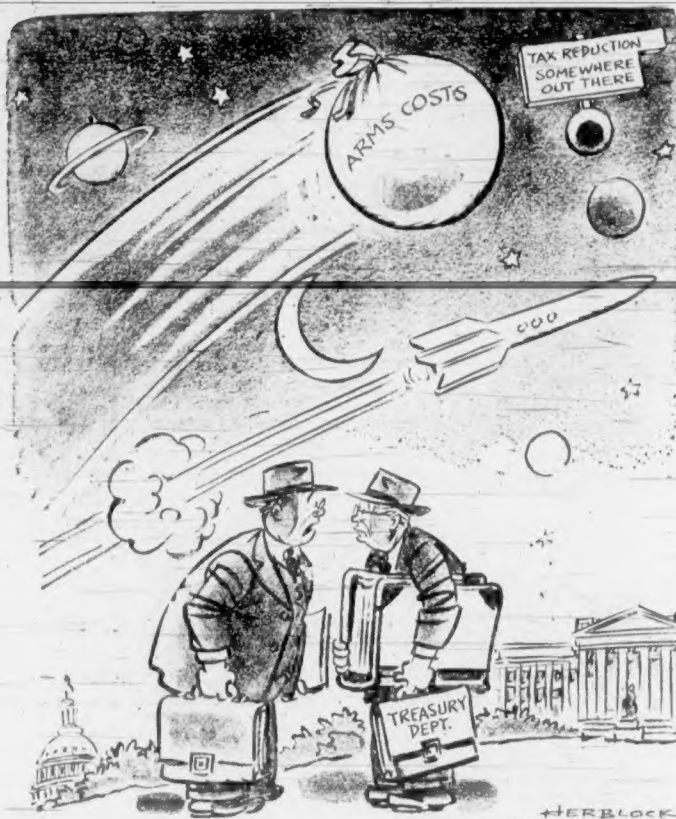

A touch of intimacy is imparted when "Cordially yours" precedes the signature, and if the letter should be an acknowledgement of favors conferred the recipient need not feel overwhelmed when he reads "Thankfully yours." Much better this than "Hatefully yours," albeit not many persons admit on paper to such a betrayal of their real sentiment.

"Hopefully yours," on the other hand, is not uncommon, especially when some special pleading highlights the correspondence.

Government departments, or business either for that matter, seldom unhesitatingly subscribe themselves facetiously, although the world would be a brighter place to live in if they did. "Yours till the cows come home," perhaps, or "Yours with mud in your eye" would be a welcome if unusual version of a well-worn written theme.

Why "Yours" should be used at all is itself a curiosity. Seldom indeed, if ever, must the sender consider he belongs to the receiver, and quite frequently he would run away from any such close affinity. The use of "Yours" is perhaps the most inappropriate of all the shades of sentiment to which formal correspondence has given rise.

Perhaps it is time to eliminate entirely these superfluous inanities. We might well content ourselves with placing the signature immediately after the last word of the last sentence. This is memo style, but at least it would ease the ingenuity required to define precisely the relationship the writer intends to convey.

"Happy New Geofiscal Year"

Reports from Ottawa

HUNDREDS of Liberal government policies, ranging from refusal to air condition public buildings to the appointment of Canadian-born governors-general, are in jeopardy as a result of the change of administration.

Some already are ticketed for change by election promises to reduce taxes, improve farm price supports, make "fairer" fiscal deals with the provinces, build "roads to resources" and other public projects the Liberals rejected, and curb monopoly in broadcasting and aviation. Change in a few others, such as the Liberals' tight money policy, has been pledged since the new government took over.

During the fortnight of Prime Minister Diefenbaker's visit to Britain, the new departmental ministers have been marking time on policy matters while familiarizing themselves with their new administrative responsibilities. But in talking to several of them, I have been impressed by their seeming determination to get on with making policy changes and doing all the other things they promised during the campaign.

The prospect of another election next year counsels against delay. As one of them commented, "The people expect us to do what we said we'd do."

While election promises thus demand priority, all the policies the Liberals laid down in the last 22 years are open to review and change. This is a gargantuan task. It will require more time than is available between now and a spring election, but it is one to which the administration must address itself, at least on a selective basis, with reasonable speed.

Over the years Diefenbaker and others who now suddenly find themselves in power have criticized innumerable Liberal policies. However, it would be quite unrealistic to assume that because Minister X denounced a government policy when he was a member of the opposition, he will suddenly reverse it now.

For one thing, when the Tories were in opposition they were often shooting in the dark. One of their major complaints was that the Liberal government failed to take Parliament into its confidence. Consequently their criticism was based largely on the outward appearances of Liberal policy, without knowing all the reasons for the government's adoption of that policy.

Now the Tory ministers are able to examine policies in the light of the contents of departmental files and the explanations of the deputy ministers, who, under the Liberal administration, helped frame those policies. They may conclude in some instances that their earlier criticism is not justified.

A second consideration is cost. An opposition does not have to find money to implement its proposals; a government does. And the new government is not likely to have much loose uncommitted cash.

However, there are some Liberal policies which rankle with many Tories, and which will take little if any money to change. It is in this rather restricted area where political exigencies permitting, we may expect some significant policy changes prior to the election.

On the basis of known Conservative views, it is logical to anticipate a return to British governors-general, a rescue of the word "dominion" from the limbo to which the Liberals consigned it, passage of a Bill of Rights, establishment of appeal boards for persons fired as security risks, de-emphasis on ability to speak French as a prerequisite for high government posts, and an easing of government censorship of imported literature.

The Packsack

The Bear and the Calf

By GREGORY CLARK

A TOWERMAN in the district of Gopama in northern Ontario was up in his eyrie watching, as towermen do, hour by hour, for the first telltale wisp of smoke from a forest fire when he saw, in a small lake not too far from his tower, a cow moose come out to the shore and wade in amidst the lily pads. Behind her came two moose calves. The towerman picked up his field glasses for a cosy look at this pretty woodland entertainment.

The calves were very young, and characteristically ungainly on their long, stilted legs. While the mother buried her head in the water to uproot the lily pads, the two calves gambolled about on the shore and took small experimental paddles in the water's edge.

The towerman had his glasses actually on the calves when he saw, in the edge of the field of his binoculars, a bear suddenly come crouching out of the underbrush back of the shore. It took cover behind some sedges and waited until the cow moose, munching on lily pads, again buried her head in the water to uproot a fresh supply. And then the bear charged.

It seized one of the paralyzed calves by the neck, and hoisting it, retreated to the bush, part of the time on his hind legs, part of the time dropping to all fours to drag; and before the cow moose raised its head, the bear and calf vanished into the brush. The cow, puzzled, stared around, and then came ashore to run in bewildered circles around the remaining calf, and sniffing frantically at the bear scent in the air.

It was a drama in one act, consuming less than half a minute of time.

After a few moments of frenzied circling, the cow led the surviving calf hurriedly off down the shore and into the bush.

The towerman is one of those who, next spring, when the suckers are running by the thousands in all the creeks, will dip himself a few hundred to toss out on the shore to rot and broadcast a most seductive stink. But a few dozen he will take to nearby pens, made of old logs and stumps, and there he will shove them far into the pens. And in the entrance to the pens, he will set great, grim bear traps, with iron chains affixing them to drag logs.

And when he gets a bear, he will think of that moose calf, and skin the bear and sell the hide to a tourist for $10.

On the Record

For Atomic Control

By DOROTHY THOMPSON

SPEAKING in Lubek, West Germany, at an assembly of the Max Planck Society for Scientific Research, Prof. Otto Hahn called last Friday for a politically independent international conference of nuclear physicists to achieve controlled and inspected atomic disarmament.

Professor Hahn, a Nobel Prize winner, was the first man to split the atom and is one of the world's most eminent nuclear physicists. During the war the scientific knowledge that made it possible to create the first atomic bomb was possessed by very few men, Hahn was one.

The question of whether Germany or her enemies would first produce "the decisive weapon" was crucial in the latter days of the Second World War.

Germany was way ahead in guided missiles and the only country to introduce them against Great Britain. There was reason to believe that her scientists and technicians might be the first to crack the problem of producing the A-bomb. Actually, the key clue was given by the late Prof. Albert Einstein, who was a German physicist, handed to Germany's enemies by the fact of his being a Jew who like several other German scientists despised Hitler on other grounds, too.

As there was reason to fear that Germany might first get the bomb, there is also reason to believe that Professor Hahn deliberately held back, and tried, via Lisa Meitner, his assistant until compelled to leave Germany for Denmark because she, too, was Jewish, to persuade his international colleagues to do the same.

Professor Hahn never apparently had any doubt that thermonuclear energy turned to war uses would threaten the world with a catastrophe transcending national and ideological conflicts.

Professor Hahn was one of the 19 German physicists who, last April, formally refused to participate in any program for the production of atomic armaments for the West German army. But unless all such armaments come under international control, the federal republic does intend to equip its army with such weapons from American or British sources.

So Professor Hahn, in continuing his fight against their production and use by anybody, has returned to his idea that nuclear scientists, as an international body, have a responsibility transcending to political plans and ambitions, and now should intervene to call a halt and propose means to achieve effectively controlled and inspected atomic disarmament.

Professor Hahn is thoroughly alarmed about the consequences of a thermonuclear war. In his all too briefly reported Lubek address, he said it was "intolerable that the dangers of such a war should be handed over to the heads of the people of the world." He accused the Russians of threatening to melt the polar ice with hydrogen bombs and inundate whole continents, while the West is hoisting its capacity to destroy all life in an enemy country.

His suggestion of a "politically independent conference" is addressed to American, European and Russian physicists. The question is whether there is any politically independent Russian physicist or otherwise?

This doubt may abort the attempt to enlist the physicists to control the forces they have unleashed. Doubt of the German physicists' sincerity in attempting to prevent the creation of the bomb caused that move to founder.

But if anybody can devise a fool-proof method of inspection and control of atomic weapons, it should be the nuclear scientists.

Fun, Fact and Fiction

It's becoming increasingly difficult for a man over 45 to get a job, yet science says that before long we'll be living to 150. Just imagine, a century in a rocking chair.

Young couples in new houses always seem to be making repairs, whereas in an old place there's so much that needs fixing that there's really no point in doing anything.

A big fair in Chicago will feature a million-dollar electric train by Remington Rand. It remains to be seen if it will attract as big a crowd as Remmy's sister, Sally, did last time.

Khrushchev's latest "disarmament" proposals are repetitious, indicating that he has discovered the same sad lesson as the TV comedians — that there just isn't enough fresh material to keep the show going indefinitely.

The U.S. post office department has announced that it will give away its old pens. But it may take a little thinking to come up with a list of friends who have always wanted an old post-office pen.

For a National Flag

With the advent of a new government the question of a Canadian national flag seems to be rising again. Now, it seems to me that as long as we insist on the Union Jack alone as an integral part of that flag there is little hope that it can be accepted with unanimity.

If we put the shoe on the other foot this is quite understandable. Let us suppose that in the early years of our history hundreds or thousands of British settlers had poured into the valley of the St. Lawrence or the coast of the Mar-their homes with painful, pioneer labor, along came a French army, captured the country and hoisted the Tricolor over it. Do you think we should have viewed with complacency this symbol of conquest waving over us? I very much doubt it.

I hope it may be possible for some of our artists to design a compromise that may be acceptable to all parties. In any case it is time we had a national flag, and I would like to see one that breathes, not of war and conquest, but of peace and good will to all and hope for unity through the years to come.

Backward Outlook

When will the thinking people of Saanich wake up? Do they wish to continue in the same old almost seamless rut with roads falling apart and a lack of amenities due to a backward outlook all these years?

Greater Victoria can only grow one way and that is North into Saanich. I have been a taxpayer there for many years and am appalled at the desire of the different councils the members of which have been and are still living in the horse and buggy days.

Reeve Ash should be highly commended for his courageous stand despite continuous opposition. The taxpayers should definitely be given a referendum to decide on the expenditure of $225,000 proposed to spend on a most unsuitable and worn out building in an unsuitable location.

What about the future? Saanich has never really looked ahead with proper pride; with the right outlook ahead Saanich could now have sewers, proper buildings, and other amenities all at low cost.

Amalgamation is inevitable and should be seriously considered.

Civil Service Strike

The president of the Victoria branch of the B.C. Government Employees' Association declared in his press letter (July 6th) he "conceded that wage boosts should halt somewhere." However, the association's action is anything but a "halt" in wage boost demands. Then he goes on to complain "But when the cost of living continues to rise, and your own neighbour's return is far above your own level some adjustment is necessary."

Does he not know that higher cost of living is mainly due to the wage spiral? He selfishly ignores the fixed income and pensioner groups. In fact, he just ignores everything but the essence of greed and strike tactics.

This time, at least, the Premier is right. Neither the government nor the public should yield to such selfishness and strike-threat-arrogance and intimidation. There is too much of this already in the tyrannical trade union movement which, too, should be curbed.

Really Worthwhile

We keep crying out for more homes for the aged, especially for one where the old gentleman and lady who have lived together for untold years may enjoy a few more years in peace and comfort. We cry for a building large enough for our many conferences, concerts, etc., two very worthy centennial projects staring us in the face. The first would be something really worthwhile, and an honour to the people of Victoria, as well as to our elderly citizens.

Otter Point Leads Big Salmon Yield From Local Waters

South Vancouver Island waters continued to give up big salmon during the past weekend with Otter Point the particular hot spot but Oak Bay and Saanich Inlet providing their share of good fishing.

Gordon Campbell, 1210 Tatter, sail Drive, had a trip to be remembered on Sunday when he boated 35's and 33's-pound spring salmon while fishing off Otter Point. Fred Buxton, with a 25-pound, 10-ounce fish, and Joe Ford, who had a 22-pounder, were among those who scored Saturday.

Len Humber got the biggest one off Oak Bay on Sunday, a 25-pounder caught off Chatham Island, but the biggest of the weekend went to Muriel Guillet, who brought a 32-pounder to husband Charles's raft on Saturday to practically assure herself of winning a July crest in the Daily-Colonist King Fish Contest.

Sunday's big one from Saanich Inlet was the 25 1/2-pounder taken by P. Greenstreet. Doug Ray clicked with a 27 1/2-pounder Saturday.

BIG SALMON NEEDED

All of which means that it's going to take a big fish to win a July crest in the King Fish Contest, bigger even than the 25 or 26-pounder needed for June.

First prize-winners for June will be announced later this week along with the winners of hidden-weight prizes, which will be topped for June by the Plexus waterproof outfit donated by Edward Lipsett Ltd.

Casey Picks Youthful Bunning To Start for American League

Jim Bunning, a young, hard-throwing righthander who has pitched impressively this season for Detroit Tigers, is manager Casey Stengel's choice as starting pitcher for the American League in today's major league all-star game.

Stengel admitted that he had originally intended to start Early Wynn but the Cleveland veteran pitched seven innings on Sunday. However, Bunning, while this is his first starting season, should prove tough for the National League sluggers.

Only 25 and in his second big league season, Bunning leads his league in the earned-run average.

Victoria fans can watch the all-star game on channel 4 starting at 11:30 a.m.

ages with a fine 2.03 mark and has won 12 games while losing two. Last season, appearing in 15 games and working 53 innings, he won five and lost one.

POWER PROBLEM Stengel will probably stay with righthanders to try and take care of the power problem presented by a line-up which includes such right-handed hitting sluggers as Hank Aaron, Willie Mays and Frank Robinson. Billy Loeb, one-time Brooklyn star who has apparently recovered from a sore arm, is a likely choice to pitch the second three innings for the American League.

Wynn and Bob Grim are righthanders who can be used in relief and Stengel has in Billy Pierce, Bobby Shantz and Don Mossi, three southpaws good enough to face any kind of a batting order.

Stengel will also probably change his line-up considerably as soon as the starters named by the fan poll have played their required three innings.

American League fans, it is agreed by most, didn't do their picking as well with their hearts and shortstop Gil McDougald, third baseman Frank Malzone and first baseman Bill Skowron likely take over from Harvey Kuenn, George Kell and Vic Wertz as soon as possible.

STARTS SOUTHPAW Walt Alston, manager of the National League team, hopes to broil the left-handed threat of the American League represented by Ted Williams, Yogi Berra and Nellie Fox by starting Curt Simmons, veteran Philadelphia southpaw.

But the starting American League line-up has good right-handed hitters in switch-hitting Mickey Vernon, Kell, Al Kaline and Kuenn and when Stengel makes changes it will likely be with such right-handed hitters as Skowron, Malzone, Roy Sievers, McDougald and Gus Triandos. Alston may have to go to his right-handed pitching instead of following on with Johnny Antonelli.

Alston has such starboard toasters as Larry Jackson, Lew Burdette and rookie Jack Sanford to call on as well as Clem Lahne, who may be saved for the last.

STRONG BENCH Changes can be expected in the National League starting line-up, too. Alston has an impressive bench and will likely give third baseman Ed Matthews, first baseman Gil Hodges, second baseman Red Schoendienst and a shortstop Ernie Banks and Johnny Logan a few innings.

The National League, which has won the last two games, is rated the 65 favorite. Should the game, scheduled at St. Louis, be rained out today, the alternate starting times will be tonight, Wednesday morning and Wednesday afternoon.

Ahead in the series, 10-13, the American League has lost six of the last seven games and Stengel has been the losing manager five times out of six.

NOTTINGHAM, England (Reuters)—An unfinished sixth wicket stand of 86 between Colin Smith and Denis Atkinson Monday kept alive the West Indies' chance of saving the third cricket test against England.

With one more day left for play, the West Indies are 72 runs behind England's huge total of 619 for six declared, and have five second innings wickets left.

The touring team, losing their remaining seven first innings wickets for 77, were all out for 372 shortly before lunch. Forced to bat again, they scored 175 for five in their second innings when the fourth day's play ended.

Opening batter Frank Worrell remained unbeaten for 191 in the West Indies' first innings. He batted for 9 1/2 hours and hit 26 boundaries.

Other close-of-play scores: West Indies 1st Innings 372 (Worrell 191, Smith 86, Atkinson 86, Edwards 86, Robinson 86, Stanger 86, Taylor 86, Walters 86, White 86, Wright 86).

England 1st Innings 619 (Smith 86, Atkinson 86, Edwards 86, Robinson 86, Stanger 86, Taylor 86, Walters 86, White 86, Wright 86).

England 2nd Innings 175 (Smith 86, Atkinson 86, Edwards 86, Robinson 86, Stanger 86, Taylor 86, Walters 86, White 86, Wright 86).

Dodgers Lose Twice

Cards Retain Lead On Sweep of Reds

Selection of St. Louis for the all-star game has turned out to be fortunate scheduling. St. Louis fans are all hopped up about the pennant chances of the Cardinals, particularly after the doubleheader sweep over Cincinnati Reds on Sunday.

A crowd of 20,316 fans cheered themselves hoarse as Joe Cunningham converted first baseman who has been winning the ball of late, led the Cards to their 3-2 and 9-6 wins with six hits which boosted his batting average to .391.

Cunningham batted in all three St. Louis wins in the first game.

It was a different story in Brooklyn. There, only 16,805 fans turned out for a doubleheader against Philadelphia and had little to cheer about as the Dodgers lost by 2-1 and 5-3 scores to slide to fifth place, five games off the pace.

It was the first time since mid-season of 1948 that the Dodgers had been in the second division.

Ed Bouchee's ninth-inning home run beat St. Louis in the first game while ex-Dodger Chico Fernandez broke up the second with a three-run double in the sixth inning.

In the American League, the Chicago White Sox made it five in a row as they two-timed Cleveland Indians, 9-8 in 13 innings and 7-2, but they could only gain a half game on the New York Yankees, who kept winning with a 7-5 conquest of Washington Senators.

Results moved the Cards two and a half games in front of Milwaukee Braves, who won 4-2, in a single game against Chicago Cubs. The Cards have now won five in a row, including a four-game sweep of the Reds, and nine of their last 10.

Broken Thumb Leads...

Honest Abe Innocent—Just Ask 'Knockout'

By OSCAR FRALEY
NEW YORK (UPI)—Wiry, wispy Abe Attell, at 74 still as fit as any featherweight contender, looks at the current boxing investigations with satirical speculation.

Abe figures that the truth will win out. He's a great believer in justice, this little man, because he was able to prove his own innocence 45 years ago.

That's when Abe was investigated—in provoke one of the most humorous incidents of his long career.

It seems that, in 1912, Abe was scheduled to box one Knockout Brown. This was a gladiator who, Abe admits, "shouldn't have hit me in the rumble seat with a violin. But just before the bout, Abe broke his thumb. Rather than call off the fight, he had it shot full of novocaine.

"The doctor gave me an overdose and when I got in the ring I couldn't hardly see," he recalls with a grin. "This guy I should have taken left-handed makes a bum out of me."

The boxing commission thought it detected the odor of grown up caviar and invited Abe to a full-blown inquiry. Abe told his story and the commissioners, believing he had taken a swan dive into the tank, listened amiably.

Finally dismissing him, they summoned Brown to the stand. The testimony went like this: "Did you see Mr. Attell before going to the club."

"No, sir."

"When Mr. Attell entered the ring, did he speak to you?"

"Yes, sir."

There was an uproar in the room. The commissioners, it was evident, thought they had sure evidence of collusion.

Almost gleefully they pounced on Brown.

"And what," demanded one in the voice of doom, "did he say to you?"

The room was tense and expectant. Everyone leaned forward, anticipation on their faces. Brown looked around fearfully, gulped noisily and then gave his answer.

"Well, Mr. Attell came right over to me and he said—'Hello, you silly-looking bum!'"

That broke up the hearing. It's one of Abe's most cherished memories, standing right next to the night when he was 13 years old and his mother discovered he was to have his first amateur fight. Mrs. Attell was dead set against fighting, told him never to darken the family portals again if he boxed and finally relented on his promise to preserve his "manly" reputation he would have only one hour.

Abe won without a glove being laid on him and the promoter gave him 15 silver dollars, which was heaps of coin in the year 1907. Abe rushed home, happily laying them in his mother's lap. She looked at the money, scanned his unmarked features and then said: "Well, Abe, when are you going to fight again?"

Which started Abe on a career of 365 fights in which he lost only nine and held the featherweight title for a span of 10 years and four months.

"And not a one was tainted," he grins. "Ask Knockout Brown."
